

REFORM CLUB ROW SPREADS

Blackballing of Baron de Forest Greatly Agitates Members.

MAN OF GREAT WEALTH

Rumors That May Explain Feeling Against Him in Liberal Body.

TALK OF RESIGNATIONS

Rejection of the Candidate Was Not for Political Reasons.

Special Cable Dispatch to The Sun

LONDON, Feb. 8.—There is probably no institution in the world which more dislikes the washing of its dirty linen in public than a good London club. The members of the famous Reform Club are accordingly very much annoyed that a family row in their historic home should have been the subject of so many paragraphs in the press during the past few days.

It has all arisen out of the wholesale blackballing administered to the young Baron de Forest, the Radical member of Parliament for North West Ham. This enormously wealthy member of Parliament is the nephew and heir of the late Baron Hirsch, who was a good and useful friend of the late King Edward. Baron de Forest is an hereditary Baron of the Austrian Empire and is authorized by royal license to use his title in the United Kingdom.

The Reform Club is of course the Liberal and one of the great clubs of London. It contains the aristocracy of Liberalism, just as the National Liberal Club harbors hot politics. One Liberal paper in trying to explain the blackballing of Baron de Forest points out that one blackball in ten excludes a man from membership and that there is still enough of the Tory group left in the club to destroy it as a social expression of Liberalism.

This, of course, is absurd. The Reform has always been a Liberal club, but at the time of home rule in 1886 it split. Some Liberal Unionists remained as members, but they were neither powerful enough nor "unclubbable" enough to pile up forty-nine blackballs against De Forest merely for the sake of helping to upset the Reform Club's position as a "social expression of Liberalism." The blackballing, it will also be recalled, resulted in the resignations from the club of two prominent members of the Cabinet, Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the father of the national insurance bill, and Winston Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty, and the threatened resignation of Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary.

Whether well founded or not there is a certain "on dit" concerning the young Baron recently which might make his candidature in any club liable to the most careful scrutiny. He has the power of great wealth, but represents a poor laboring constituency in the out-ports of London and takes what practically amounts to socialism. It was at the country house that the preliminary meetings were held to formulate Lloyd George's "attack on the landlords" policy. This would not militate against his candidature for the Reform Club, but merely accounts for his being put up from such influential quarters.

The reports of threatened resignations on account of his rejection may be taken with a grain of salt. There might be one or two if the trouble is not adjusted, but they would not be the club resignations in the "club" sense, but rather an indication of the pulling away from each other of certain elements in the Liberal party.

Lewis Harcourt, the Colonial Secretary, was one of the first mentioned by the papers as threatening to resign, but while no one can doubt his sincere liberalism, his standing in the party as a politician and in the Reform as a member of a great club is equally beyond question. He has taken the trouble to have it announced that there is no ground for the statement that he contemplates severing his connection with the club. As a matter of club form in England no supporters of a candidate are supposed to uphold him to the extent of resigning if he is not elected. This is contrary to the basic theory that "every club is a republic where all are absolutely equal," as one of the oldest and best known of London clubs put it to-day.

It is well known that the late King Edward VII. tried his utmost to secure the election of several friends to the Reform Yacht Squadron, but failed often enough to convince him that the attempt was useless. Sir Thomas Lipton was one of these. Nevertheless King Edward did not resign from the Royal Yacht Squadron. It is true, however, that King Edward, the Duke of Devon and Lord Grey resigned from the exclusive Reform Club when it blackballed the late Lord Rhodes, whom King Edward favored strongly. This is what persuaded King Edward, then the Prince of Wales, to start the Marlborough Club.

But, however, was a peculiar case. The Marlborough Club is the most exclusive club in London. It is supposed to be absolutely non-political, but nevertheless it is well known that Mr. Rhodes was rejected because he was a strong supporter of the late Charles Stewart Parnell and home rule and subscribed money to the home rule fund. In this case King Edward had the right of a clubman to say that it had abandoned its liberal traditions. The committee of the Reform Club recognized this very thing and agreed to elect Mr. Rhodes as one of those eminent persons that are entitled to appoint and dismiss members without a ballot.

Mr. Rhodes, however, declined and within a month was elected to the Athenium.

William Makepeace Thackeray was blackballed by the Athenium in 1849 and was elected in 1851. The late Lord Sherbrooke, Lytton and Randolph Churchill and many other distinguished men have been blackballed by the Reform Club within the last thirty years, but there was no talk of resignations in these cases.

The case of the rejection of Baron de Forest by the Reform Club, however, is an entirely different matter. The Reform is a political club, but his rejection was not for political reasons. His friends in their anxiety to bolster up his claims added Sir Edward Grey to the list of those who threatened to resign, but it turns out now that the Foreign Secretary has never been a member of the Reform Club.

ITALY'S LOTTERY UNDER BAN.

State Loses Enormous Profits by Dropping Affair.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Italy has had her last flutter in the way of lotteries. With the drawing for the $300,000 exhibition lottery, several thousand tickets for which were lost in the Titanic, having been purchased by Italians living in America, at the Argentine Theatre in Rome, Italy follows at last the lead of England and France in banishing Government authorized lotteries.

The officially recognized lottery is very slow in disappearing. Spain, Austria, Holland, Prussia and Argentina run lotteries, and tickets are eagerly bought up. Promoters' profits are enormous.

During 1907-08 the gross receipts of the Italian State lottery, whose discontinuance is now announced, amounted to $18,680,000, of which $8,000,000 was distributed in prizes, leaving $8,680,000 profit to the State after the expenses of running it had been deducted.

This particular year showed an increase in receipts of $600,000 over previous years, a remarkable indication of the extent to which the gambling fever had laid hold of the people, despite their knowledge that the State is a certain winner of almost half the money.

Prior to the suppression of lotteries in this country the State benefited considerably, and in the year of Trafalgar $1,000,000 was the net yield of a public lottery. Good Queen Bess herself was patron of the first English lottery, which was drawn by night at the door of St. Paul's Cathedral, the proceeds being devoted "toward the reparation of the havens and strength of the Realm, & toward other good works."

The $500,000 which formed the nucleus of a fund for the establishment of the British Museum was raised in this way. The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Lord Chancellor being among the managers.

Whether well founded or not there is a certain "on dit" concerning the young Baron recently which might make his candidature in any club liable to the most careful scrutiny. He has the power of great wealth, but represents a poor laboring constituency in the out-ports of London and takes what practically amounts to socialism. ## SENSATION BELL AT LLOYDS.

Is Rang When a Ship, Long Overdue, Comes Into Port.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—One of the sensation bells of the world is that which is rung occasionally at Lloyds, a bell that would have made a dramatic addition to the plot of Edgar Allan Poe's famous poem.

It is rung when a ship, long overdue and reported lost, unexpectedly reaches port. The bell rang recently to acclaim the safety of the Snowdon Range, a 3,000-ton steamship of West Hartlepool, which was towed and blown safely into Queens-town after being fifty-two days out from Philadelphia and long reported lost.

Her loss would have cost Lloyds something like $500,000. Little wonder therefore that the underwriters cheered when they heard the bell. The bell now used at Lloyds was recovered from the Lutina, a British frigate wrecked on the Dutch coast in 1799 with a cargo of bullion.

FEW TRAVEL FIRST CLASS.

Italian Railway Statistics Show Tourists Are Economical.

Rome, Jan. 29.—According to the latest statistics dealing with the railway passenger traffic in Italy out of every hundred passengers only three travel first class, while fully eighty-three travel third and fourth class, second, and 51 per cent. of the total profits are yielded by third class passengers.

Since the bulk of railway passengers in Italy is made up of foreign tourists it is evident that only a small proportion travel first class. In fact, out of a total passenger traffic of 82,000,000, which yielded $36,200,000, the third class passengers amounted to over 68,000,000 and of their tickets cost $18,400,000.

The State railways, realizing the democratic tendencies of modern tourists, have decided to have third class carriages on all express trains in Italy.
